PROPHECIES are becoming quite the fashion of late, and the papers are raking up old writings, from the Prophet Daniel to the Ancient Chef de Chantier, which seem to have foretold the actual state of the political, social and religious World. We propose to register a prophecy a la mode: "When the twentieth century dawns, the Pacific shall be the great centre of civilization! The nations of the Old World shall have mutually The New World shall have fallen into anarchical chaos, like the pre-adamic earth! The Islands of the Pacific alone shall escape from the common wreck of nations; they shall form a great Oceanic Confederation or Empire, and their happy people shall pass their time sucking sugar-cane!"-We hope some editor of the twentieth century will reproduce this remarkable prophecy or Hawaiian wanana,-that is, when it is varified, as, of course, it will be, one day or another!

The examination of this popular institution took place June 28th, in the presence of a large and appreciative audience. It has been conducted during the past year by Miss H. Carpenter, assisted by Mrs. W. L. Smith and Miss Alice West. The deportment of the pupils during the protracted exercises gave evidence of their admirable training and of their attachment to their teachers.

The distinctness of their enunciation and the general correctness of their use of the English language surprised and delighted those who understand the difficulties to be overcome in attaining such a

SATURDAY, JULY 14. Society is bound to maintain the due respect of wedded life, before all other social institutions, as it is upon the cacred character of wedlock that the very existence of society depends. Indeed, it may be safely asserted that the social state of mankind begins with the formal recognition of wedlock, which is as it were the door through which human beings emerge from the Hawaii nei, before the light of the Gospel at, during their stay ashore. dawned upon this then benighted and heathen land, when polygamy and polyandry characterised the mutual relations of the sexes. Since those times of savage existence, a great change in the social condition of the people of these Islands. Wedlock is now an honored institution of Hawaiian society, as in all other civilized and really Christian countries.

Very wisely, the law provides, in all civilized nations, for the protection of the sacred rights of wedlock. In former times, the wretch who dared to disturb the home of wedded life, was capitally punished, death alone being deemed a proportionate chastisement of so heinous a crime against society, even amongst the pagan Greeks and Romans of antiquity. Classical students may recall the story of the downfall of the kingdom of Rome, as the consequence of a similar crime. In later times society, without abating one iota of its abhorrence for adultery, has adopted a less severe system of punishments for this offence against its very fundamental principles. Pecuniary fines have been imposed upon those who have been found guilty of this

To come home to our own doors in Hawaii nei, where so recently the hallowed institution of Christian wedlock has been so happily substituted for heathen impurity, it is unfortunately too notorious that a most scandalous case has been prominently brought before the public of this kingdom, in which a husband has appealed to the lawful tribunals of the land to do him justice against the man who has invaded and destroyed his home. Since a jury has pronounced the accused guilty, we are compelled to assume his guilt. It is reasonable, then, to ask : is the amount of damages awarded by the jury to the injured husband, at all proportion the wrong that has been done to his wedded existence? Is it not, indeed, a mockery of justice? And further, if an adulterer is allowed to escape with a nominal punishment, by the award of justice, how is society to be henceforward protected against similar attacks upon the sanctity of wedlock? It is worse than absurd to argue that the faults of a husband or wife can be any mitigation for the sin of the adulterer. If this principle be once recognized in our judicial proceedings, farewell to the sacred condition of wedlock. There is only one way of viewing this case; if the crime of adultery was committed, as appears proved, the punishment by the jury's award is completely and absurdly inadequate to its heinousness.

This leads us to say a word on the system of trial by jury. Whatever may be said in favor of this system, there are certainly cases where it is almost impossible to find twelve men who, in any case of a certain importance, can be said to be wholly unprejudiced on either side. Juries, merits of the case whereon they are called to pronounce their verdict; and, under these circumstances, what can be expected but a disabuse of the system of trial by jury?

Since the foregoing remarks were written, we notice some comments on this case in our local contemporary. Whatever differences of opinion may prevail on other interesting little topics, between this journal and our neighbor, we are glad to find that we agree on the all important question for society of the sacredness of wedlock. We have refrained from discussing the facts of the case, as our contemporary does, because we consider that it is not of any real importance to society here to know more of this scandalous case than that a jury has found a man guilty of adultery and nevertheless awarded only nominal damages against him, thus evidently showing a disregard or oversight of its first duty to the State, the protection of society by the justness eaten each other up, like the Kilkenny Cats! of its verdict. This opinion we have expressed, irrespective of any consideration for either of the men or the woman in this case concerned, upon the broad principle that there never can be any extenuating circumstances for the heinous crime of adultery, and that the character of one or both of the spouses cannot affect the true merits

> THE PUBLIC notice which has been issued from the office of the Minister of the Interior, that the lease of the Hawaiian Hotel for five years would be sold at auction on the 30th day of August next, appears to us to be a transaction which is well calculated to call for some

The history of the Hawaiian Hotel is so generally known that it seems superfluous to enter into needless repetitions on the subject. Suffice it to say that the Hawaiian Hotel was built at the joint cost of government, and a company of shareholders, more than five years ago. It may be described as a patriotic undertaking in the promotion of which the actual Minister of the Interior took a prominent and very praise-worthy part. The salubrious the fundamental principles of the climate and romantic scenery of these pic- of Portland, Oregon, June 9th, is one of a tuesque Islands of Hawaii nei possess rare at- series of articles which recently appeared in tractions for tourists from the neighboring that journal attacking the Hawaiian Treaty. Under are to that extent mischievous. But any these favorable circumstances a commodious merchant or business man knows quite well and pleasant Hotel became a grand desideratum | that the price of sugar, like that of any other in this capital of the Hawaiian Kingdom, not commodity, is and must be governed by the to say a matter of absolute necessity. This laws of demand and supply, over which the view of the case urged itself so forcibly on the matter of customs charges can have but little attention of several leading members of the influence. Besides, the writer starts from a community as well as of the government of that false premise when he asserts that "The reday, that the present magnificent Hotel was erected at a coast of about one hundred and entire sugar product of the Hawaiian Islands." fifty thousand dollars, of which the government advanced a very large amount. Since the estab-lishment was opened in 1872, there has been for the benefit of the seminary, which was not only a decided financial success, but did great credit to the proficiency of the pupils both in needlework and embroidery and in the sulinary art.

The school was never more deserving of the confidence and support of the people of Maui than at present, and we hope that its devoted and self denying fruits of their labors in many a happy Christian fruits of their labors in many a happy Christian home in which their teaching shall be carried into daily life and practice.

One general expression of admiration from all tourists who have visited Honolulu and resided in this Hotel whether for a single day, or weeks or months; and books of travel as well as the sum of all the existing contracts held by the San Francisco Refineries in these Islands amounts to a little over forty per cent, of the entire sugar crop of the Islands and for the present year only. The sugars thus sold in advance are what are known as second and third sugars; the grocery grades to be enjoyed in the elysium of the grand Hotel of the Metropolis of romantic Hawaii neither than the sum of all tourists who have visited Honolulu and resided in this Hotel whether for a single day, or weeks or months; and books of travel as well as the sum of the San Francisco Refineries in these Islands amounts to a little over forty per cent, of the entire sugar crop of the Islands and Australia, have teemed with notices of the charming life to be enjoyed in the elysium of the grand the sum of the present year only. The sugar statistics held by the San Francisco Refineries in these Islands amounts to a little over forty per cent, of the entire sugar crop of the Islands and sum of the sum of the sum of the sum of the period in these Islands amounts to a little over forty per cent, of the entire sugar crop of the Islands and sum of the su

Now from the very commencement, the establishment of the Hawaiian Hotel was undertaken more for the advantages which were likely to result indirectly to the capital and the country has been wrought, by the light of Gospel truth, from the presence of a first class house of entertainment in our metropolis, than with a view to any direct profit to be derived by the government or the patriotic private shareholders from the business of the Hotel itself. For this reason, it was first leased for a term of five years, at no rent whatever, on condition of its being kept open for the convenience of the public in a fitting style. As to its management during that period, no complaints whatever have been raised, and its innumerable advantages were self-evident. Subsequently, it was thought that a rent should be paid by the lessee, which was fixed at $6,000 a year. But, unfortunately the lessee (Mr. Herbert) found that he could not "run" the business when burdened with that heavy rent, and accordingly, he has been obliged to throw up his lease, which is the reason why government has now put up the lease of the Hotel at auction for a period of five years.

Perhaps there is no position in the world more unsuited to a government than that of a hotel-keeper. The very best thing the government could do with the Hawaiian Hotel, would be to sell it to some private speculator or company. By advertising the sale of this Hotel in San Francisco and the States, it is very likely that some man of capital would be found, who would be willing to pay down the first cost, say $150,000, for the purchase of the Hawaiian Hotel off-hand. The government and the present share-holders would thus get back their own money; and, as a private speculation, the Hotel ought to pay very well its owners. If a purchaser was not found, another plan would be for the government to offer its shares in the Hotel to a joint stock company, to be formed along with the present share-holders, for the purpose of " running" the Hotel as a private venture. Under all circumstances government should strive to get back the money of the country, now invested in this Hotel, thus ridding itself of the awkwardness of acting as a hotelkeeper, even at some sacrifice, with the certainty that the Hotel will be worked better in the hands of a private speculator or a joint-stock company than it ever can be, while it remains at the charge of the government.

Various opinions prevail on a very solemn question,-that of capital punishments. At present we refer to the subject briefly, as a man now lies under sentence of death in Oahu Jail. Without entering into the merits of the case, we suggest that all those persons in this Kingdom, who conscientiously believe that capital punishment is unjustifiable in the eyes of God and man, should take steps to draw up a memorial then, are empaneled, the members of which have to His Majesty the King, praying him to exeralready fully made up their minds upon the case his Royal prerogative by commuting the capital sentence, in this case. We shall subsequently take occasion to make some additional remarks upon the subject of capital punishment, tortion of justice, and a discreditable as an exercise of a right which is in the hands of God alone.

How it is Done.

It seems there are those who are unable to see how the treaty with Hawaii has resulted in raising the price of sugars in our markets, or how it can operate solely in the interest and for the benefit of the refiners of San Francisco. Why, it is demanded, if the monopoly has advanced prices, do not other importers and merchants obtain supply from elsewhere? The apparer is easy. A simple statement of a few where? The answer is easy. A simple state The refiners, commanding very large capital, have obtained control of the entire sugar product of the Hawaiian Islands. The planters are simply their agents. Nobody can obtain sugars for shipment except on terms made by the sugar monopoly of San Francisco, which controls the mills and plantations. Competition, therefore in this transfer and plantaions. Competition, therefore, in this trade cannot exist. The operators "ship the sugars at such times and in such quantities as may give them best opportunity to hold the market in their own hands. Now the supply from this source, though large, is not large enough for the consumption of the whole Pacific coast. A certain quantity must be imported from other countries, or supplied from Eastern markets. But this monopoly, by reason of obtaining such a vast quantity from Hawaii free of duty, is able to make prices for the balance that comes from other places. Any importer who doesn't come to terms at once, is undersold for the time and quickly come to terms at once, is undersold for the time and quickly ruined. No one can venture to compete with so powerful an adversary. Prices are advanced or reduced nearly every week in the most arbitrary fashion. These fluctuations are simply signs that the monopoly is crushing somebody who has had the hardihood to attempt competition with it. All losses sustained by the monopoly in these transactions are quickly made good out of the enormous profits of the immense trade they control; for sugar is an article of universal consumption, the demand for it is uniform and steady, and it will sell freely at the advanced price when it cannot be had at the lower rate. In this way the monopoly that imports the enormous product of the Islands free of duty also virtually has control of all sugars imported from elsewhere. It regulates the market to suit its views of its own interest.

We have seen how the petroleum market has fallen under

We have seen how the petroleum market has fallen under control of a single management, and how prices are made to fluctuate to meet its caprices and minister to its greeds. The Hawaiian treaty gives opportunity for similar manipulation of the sugar market of the Pacific coast. Given, the advantage derived from the importation by a single company of so great a quantity of sugar free of duty, and the remainder of the work is simple and easy. What follows is a matter of course. The government loses the revenue, consumers pay more for sugar, competition for the market is out of the question, and the monopoly has full sway. The treaty is a great mistake. the monopoly has full sway. The treaty is a great mistake. Besides its injurious consequences from a general point of view, it has destroyed the direct trade of Oregon with the Islands, because our merchants can no longer get a keg of sugar there except on such terms as are agreeable to the refiners of San Francisco. If they should attempt importation from other places, they would be undersold until driven from the market or brought to the terms of the monopoly. View how we will, the treaty is a real grievance. It is a good thing for the parties who were so anyions to large it engeted now we will, the treaty is a real grievance. It is a good thing for the parties who were so anxious to have it enacted, but it bears hard on the masses of people and on an important branch of trade. It creates special privileges at the expense of the public interests, and is the reverse of reciprocity in everything but in name. Sugars from all sources should be let in free of duty, or this treaty should be terminated as speedily as possible.
